

RE-BUILT + RE-OPENED
ARTESIAN HOTEL COMPLETES 'PERFECT SELF-DRIVE ITINERARY' FOR OKLAHOMA VISITORS
19/10/13

The opening of Sulphur, OK's historic new property - the Artesian Hotel - completes, says Kansas / Oklahoma Travel & Tourism in the UK, "a perfect self-drive itinerary for visitors to Oklahoma, whether they're on a Route 66 road trip or a longer visit to the Sooner State."

Commenting following the launch of the hotel - originally opened in 1906, but destroyed by fire in 1962 and now re-built to evoke the original and legendary Artesian, UK&I Kansas/Oklahoma representative Matt Bates continues, "flying into Tulsa, with its vibrant music and arts scene; then taking Route 66 - the Mother Road - to Oklahoma City, replete with its own attractions, and now striking deep into Chickasaw Nation country with a stay in Sulphur, OK at this beautiful new property, visitors from the UK&I can experience the rich tapestry of Oklahoma - food, music, art, history and today's Native American culture - in one unforgettable trip.

81 characterful rooms, a spa and casino, all across three floors in this wonderfully evocative building - it's a memorable environment from which to explore the superb new Chickasaw Nation Cultural Center, with its excitingly curated and displayed narrative of the tribe's proud history ... and visitors can even top off their stay with a visit to the adjacent luxury chocolate factory, and perhaps bring some treats home."

Kansas / Oklahoma Travel & Tourism is working with a number of travel services provider partners, both in the UK and Ireland, to bring these exciting new fly-drive itineraries to leisure travellers, and much more information and material can be found at the new microsite - www.travelksok.co.uk.
